Creator of Pure Feelings and Thoughts, One Circle of Creation

January 21, 1997

Well, all right, Zoosh speaking. What's on the agenda for tonight?

How about the being who gave the Creator that sense of impatience? Can that being talk?

You mean the being that was all of you?

Yes.

You mean from that time frame?

Yes.

But you're talking about the part of Creator . . .

The part of the Explorer Race that agitated the Creator.

I'll see. [Pause.] This is essentially the root of the Explorer Race.

The root, the total, the seed—I don't know how you would put it.

Maybe "the seed" is a good term.

Whatever wanted to do it—who or what.

We'll have to see if we can track that. You understand, it might not have a great deal of experience.

But it had a lust and a desire

Seed of the Explorer Race

All right. We are the seed being to which you have referred. At one time we were simply a portion of the being you have come to know as your Creator. And when that was the case, we were that being also. But there was a moment—not by chance but apparently by plan—when we felt something impact us. We, of course, thought that it had impacted all of the being we were in. We did not realize that it had impacted only ourselves, as the portions of Creator who have become you and all beings here.

After that feeling of impact we were very excited, and we conveyed that excitement to the rest of the being that was ourselves at that time. But the rest of the being was not really interested. This energy was very much like a . . . how can we put it in the language of the day? . . . it was an energy of impetus. It seemed to tear us from our moorings and wanted us to hurtle out into space and find a place to create something—at that time we knew not what.

We felt ourselves trying to do that, when all of a sudden the being we were in [this Creator] seemed to have realized the urgency for us, and moved with us onto a journey that He has described in the previous session [see chapter 15 of Explorer Race: Particle Personalities]. We have had a long time to consider where that energy came from, and I think you will be able to hear from that source this night. Any questions?

No. If we can hear from that source, that would be wonderful.

Then I will see if I can stand aside and create a reverse trace to that being.

I am that which encompasses all your known, unknown and potential existence. From the beginning of my awareness I realized that it was my job to provide structure, organization, individuality, variety, philosophy, cause, purpose, effects, responsibility and many of the other things you have come to take as being part of the natural course of events. In the early days when I was in my infancy, I felt very enthusiastic about life. I felt, however, that I was primarily potential yet to be filled. If you were to have seen me then, I would have looked very transparent, though a thorough examination would have revealed a transparency that seemed to surround a vast space with no apparent objects filling that space.

In the beginning I felt this was me, and that is all. But gradually I began to want to see what I could do. I noticed that every time I had a thought there would be forms, sometimes simple shapes, other times vast shapes. I began to realize that my thoughts crystallize into substance, and they were not simply the pursuit of self-identification.

When I realized that these thoughts had the capacity to endure, I began to organize my thoughts in some form where each thought was pure unto its own self and could, as a result of its own experience, build upon what it started out its life as being. I then discovered that what I had assumed were thoughts were actually feelings. Feelings are, at the very core of their being, a foundation to thought.

When I discovered that, I went through every pure feeling I could find within myself. Then I began to add beliefs and ideas to those feelings, and I realized how complex a creation was possible. I decided it would be essential to have assistants not unlike apprentices, who would have the authority to create whole universes of their own and consult with other beings; to have some level of autonomy and still be able to consult with me if there were no other source of answers. I have noticed that these beings have come to be called creators, and I feel that is a good word for them.

After establishing that principle, I decided that the foundation for all creators must be pure feeling, that the primal feeling must be love and that everything must begin and end with love. In this way little harm could be done. Allowing for their potential to grow, I could not prevent all harm, but I could limit it with this essential programming.

So at the core of all creators is feeling. And when that feeling is attuned to pure love—and sometimes spontaneity, sometimes ideas, sometimes the sheer desire to define one's world—it is that energy, those feelings, that are the progenitor to these creators' apparitions or creations. I have often considered the pattern of what I have begun, and I do assume that it is a result of my having been placed here.

My Origin

I do remember my origin. Before I was here I existed in a place that was . . . I can only describe it as pure ecstatic feeling. It is a place so fulfilling that one cares not to leave it, nor does one have any need, for pure ecstatic feeling feeds all needs. Yet one day this source of pure ecstatic feeling, of which I was a portion, separated like the way leaves separate from a tree at the end of their season, each one moving out in its own direction with the intention of
