

The End of Fifty-Year Earth/ET Secrecy Agreement

Zoosh

January 20, 1998

Now for a brief commentary on the recent sightings of lights in Phoenix, Arizona. I will reiterate my previous position, which correlates to this sighting. These lights are caused by ground-based vehicles associated with a highly secret project in the military of the United States. I will also say, in reference to those who call the Air Force base and speak to whatever hapless individual is unlucky enough to pick up the phone, that the average personnel has no knowledge whatsoever of this. It is supersecret, and these vehicles will be flying over more cities in the future.

I also wish to say something else. The cities will be mostly in the U.S., but there will be a few flybys over foreign countries if it is felt to be safe. Generally speaking, though, they are not on any military mission, in the sense that it is not exactly a wake-up call, but it's more to get people used to the experience. There is, then, an arrangement. For a long time insiders within the military and political arenas of stable governments worldwide (certainly the U.S.) have had an arrangement whereby when a certain year came—which was 1998 and beyond—that it would be a good thing if stable governments, utilizing technology provided by extraterrestrials, could begin flying this technology over their own towns and cities in order to get people used to the idea of UFOs as a benevolent phenomenon. This is not to suggest that a lot of UFOs that have been sighted over other cities and countries and over the ocean are all from ground-based aircraft. But some are, and I use the Phoenix sightings because this is a typical example.

Pacts with ETs in the 1940s

This arrangement between the military and extraterrestrials goes way back. Early in the forties the extraterrestrials made this arrangement with various high-placed individuals, the military and the political establishment of the time. These were relatively stable governments, and although they shared some of this with governments that have changed since then, these governments and systems have largely stayed in place, though personnel has changed. The arrangement was that sharing the technology would ultimately provide a more benevolent technological expression for the peoples of the Earth—meaning that what you are now experiencing as a day-to-day phenomenon of electronics, computers and even biogenetics was to some degree greatly speeded up by this process.

From the extraterrestrial point of view, it was not only to help you along in your motion toward becoming universal citizens, but also to do what they could to help you on Earth to keep from self-destructing before you discovered that you were not alone, that there was lots of help available, to say nothing of friends you haven't met yet (at least most of you haven't), and that there would be available to you a common ground. Now, it was felt by certain beings (extraterrestrials and their teachers) that it would be best if most of the flybys in the late eighties and now the nineties would be done by them. But they also felt that as time progressed (especially after 1995), it would be useful if you had developed some ships or rebuilt some they lent you to fly some missions yourself, as long as the missions were totally benevolent (they would monitor you, by the way, to make sure they were).

So what we have here in recent days in Phoenix, Arizona, is another one of these flybys. In this latest circumstance the lights were lined up in such a way as to be clearly perceived as individual lights. (There was some confusion last time: Was it one vehicle or was it many?) It was the same thing both times: many individual, singular vehicles. So you are being prepared. Now, I grant you that not all ships that fly through the sky and are manufactured by various secret governmental or military organizations are entirely benevolent. Some are not. But this project I am talking about is benevolent.

Can you describe these vehicles?

If you were to see them, some are disc-shaped, and some are shaped like this [draws an upright rectangular shape].

I saw one of those earlier tonight on The Learning Channel on TV. It looks like a rectangular column.

Some of them are disc-shaped. Some of them are not quite circular, but roughly have that kind of a context. (When I say disc-shaped, I do not mean a flattened disk, but what is typically referred to as a disc shape. A lot of the so-called ET technologies are involved.) The reason they're usually seen at night is that without having the light-gathering instrument activated, the vehicle itself tends to give off light through its skin. This isn't like someone flying around with a searchlight. The vehicle itself tends to radiate light. It is possible, of course, to draw that light in with an instrument that is rare but available to some secret establishments. If that is done, it is possible to intentionally mask the vehicle, but if that switch is not activated, it is intended that the vehicle be seen.

I would also say this to big cities who have helicopter policing and so on: If a helicopter should fly over to where the ships are, it is possible that its instruments could be affected, so give yourself a degree of boundary. Don't fly any closer than three miles if you can help it. That's part of the reason the lights usually appear in places where they are not likely to encounter many airplanes or helicopters. I mention this as an aside to the occasional pilot and reporters who might be able to use a helicopter: It's probably not safe to get much closer than three miles because of the electrical radiation that would unintentionally interfere with instruments. Three, maybe three and a half miles, is probably safe.

How high can these vehicles fly beyond the orbit of the Earth?

If you are talking about going to the Moon, they might have capabilities like that, but in terms of who is going to fly them, they don't have the life support required for such missions, in terms of ground-based ships.

How many of these ships are there?

Oh, I should think that at any given time and place, seeing more than seven would be unlikely, though at the outside, even eight or nine. However, seeing three to five is most likely.

Are the nine available as the total, or do different bases each have nine?

You have to understand that if these vehicles are seen, they are not coming from a local air base. No, they are not located that way. They are centrally located.

Okay, in the place where they're based there is a total of possibly nine or ten, and then they go to different cities?

Well, some of them are being parted out, as it were. At any given time on a good day (as is said in some technological circles) you might get nine up in the air, but five can get into the air pretty much anytime, and a few more are iffy.

Okay, how much can you say about this? Is it wide open right now, or do you have to be discreet?

I am being a little discreet. As you notice, I haven't said anything much about this in the past except my rather cryptic referral to the last Phoenix flyby. I am mentioning this to the degree that I can talk about it now. I don't wish to say where they're based. I don't want to say too much about who is onboard. I will just say that it is, for the most part, strictly benevolent and is really intended to gradually bring you to consciousness about extraterrestrials. I might add that as it becomes more common, it will be normal for the press to report it as if it is reporting anything else. It would be said, "Oh, more lights in the sky. How about that?" No negative comments, no laughing up their sleeves.

The whole editorial position of derisiveness about such sightings is becoming very much passé now on the official level, though on the more colloquial or anecdotal level, from person to person, it is still somewhat entrenched. It's going to take time to gradually eliminate the head-in-the sand idea—"it can't be, therefore it isn't." This attitude was promoted for a long time, and it's going to take a little while to eliminate that in this country. It will take less time in other countries because there has been a lot of what I would call official and unofficial propaganda, especially in this country. The conditioning of the average citizen has been very thorough. People in this country have been conditioned for a long time, not with a rigid hand but with an almost overly paternalistic hand. But now this is gradually being removed from you as a steady influence.

The 1947 Contract

Are these vehicles totally in the control of an arm of the U.S. military or some benevolent multinational group?

This is based on a contract that cannot be broken. The contract was originally sealed (I am using that term advisedly for those of you who understand that word) in the late forties. It was between the U.S. and some of its allies' governments and the extraterrestrials, and this contract would last for x number of years, basically about fifty years, during which the extraterrestrials would have certain rights to have clandestine contact with citizens of Earth without any interference. For that there would be trade-offs to the various governments. At the end of the contractual time (it wasn't exactly fifty years, but that's a ballpark figure) there would begin to be a public relations experience whereby the governments that could afford it would begin to help wake up the citizenry to the actual fact of extraterrestrials. This would be done as gently as possible. I might add that the insistence that it be done gently was promoted by the extraterrestrials, not Earth-based governments. Extraterrestrials understood that after many years of denial, it would be necessary to make it gentle.

Were these extraterrestrials Zetas, or were they a group of beings from various ET civilizations?

More of what I would call a group of beings. Zeta Reticulans were involved, but there were also some Pleiadians, a representative from Andromeda and Orion representatives. A Council of Sirius was represented through the Orion representative, the Council of Sirius being, loosely, a group of philosophical/scientific individuals. And several of the extraterrestrial star systems were involved.

Can you say what year the contract was sealed?

It was officially recognized as a contract in 1947.

And who signed it for the Americans? Who represented the Americans?

I am loath to say who. I would rather not. I would rather say it was three citizens of influence: one a private citizen, one a citizen associated with the military and one a public citizen, meaning in service as a government representative, all of whom represented the United States at the sealing of the contract.

The Crafts and ET Engineering Help

The crafts themselves: Are they reverse-engineered? Are they gifts? Did we manufacture them?

I will say a little bit about that because it is an interesting question. Some of the vehicles represent accidents, not shoot-downs. This whole idea that vehicles were shot down—this is not so much the case. I'll grant that a couple of vehicles were shot down, but it was because of what I would call a lack of communication. You know, if someone's communicating on one band and you are communicating on another and you can't reach each other, there are going to be mistakes like that. The ETs recognized that it was a mistake. A lot of the vehicles were knocked out of the sky because of your experimenting with radar and other such reflective electrical instrumentality, which in the beginning used huge amounts of energy. The tools were not as refined then and people didn't know they could use less energy. This created fields that were disruptive, not unlike what I mentioned before—where if you fly a helicopter into a massive electrical field, it's going to mess up your instruments even if they are shielded.

That's what happened then. But then there was one gift, what I would call a rudimentary craft (it could do this but not that) and there was also some assistance to you. Some parts and assistance were provided to help you rebuild ships. In a couple of cases the assistance was provided as long as the citizens inside the ships were returned—and they were. It's true that sometimes citizens were held, but in these cases the citizens were returned. Alive or dead, they were returned.

Then there was help (physically). Representatives would come and tell you, "This goes here and that goes there," and why. Sometimes they wouldn't answer a question, and that would be that. At other times they might help. Let's say you are the ground technician and you have these bits and pieces and don't know where they go, or you don't know what the circuitry (if I can call it that) will do once you assemble it. You are a little shy about assembling it, not knowing what it will do, which is reasonable because sometimes this "circuitry" has more than one way to be assembled. If it is assembled one way, it will self-destruct the vehicle, not unlike switches. If it is assembled another way, it will be very useful in transporting this or that. If it is assembled still another way, it might be a weapon. What would be given is the way to assemble it, for instance, whereby you could use it as a device to transport something; you could use a field effect to move a heavy object from one place to another.

That kind of help was granted, and it was always done in such a way as to teach the technician something on a spiritual level as well as a mechanical level. We are not talking about only mechanical guidance here.

On The Learning Channel's program "Alien Secrets: Area 51," I just watched a man who's probably in his seventies saying that for sixteen years he worked alongside a Zeta who assisted him and others in modifying these vehicles for humans. Whenever he had a question, the Zeta would already know it and would answer in his mind. He said he had been permitted to come out and say this on this television show by his employers. You are confirming exactly what was on television tonight.

Trial Balloons in Educational TV and the Press

I would say that it's a worthy thing that it is coming out. You see, it's coming out on legitimate stations. I don't want to say that some television programs are only sensationalist, but some are a little more tabloid than others. Now you have programs that are basically educational television, which are perhaps a little more legitimate in the eyes of the average viewer, and this is important. So you won't think I am heaping scorn on so-called tabloid television, sometimes tabloid television and newspapers perform valuable functions by putting out stories that would not get into the conventional press and into the public eye. Sometimes it is speculation presented as fact, but at other times it is actual eyewitness testimony. Now this information is beginning to move from that trial-balloon position into the more educational press, and it will continue from there.

It is really not such a big move to say that something is benevolent. You just have to understand that ships from other planets might be very benevolent with benevolent people in them. The ships that are not benevolent (which are very few indeed) are held at bay these days. They can't get to you; they won't get to you, as it's not possible. By the time you have ships of your own and you can get to them, those individuals will be benevolent. Everything is on track so that when you meet people they will be benevolent and will be looking forward to meeting you. I am saying this largely for those of you out there who are convinced that some ships are dangerous, with dangerous beings on board. The greatest danger, as you have discovered in your own personal history on this planet, is ignorance.

It's been a couple of years, but the last time you discussed this, the secret government had technology that kept all ET ships away from the planet. Have the ETs gotten around that? Are ships able to come and go more freely?

The spectrum of light in which they were approaching your solar system has been modified to a different wave. That's all I want to say, because the Sinister Secret Government can hear me too, you know. It is a different wave that I do not think is possible to block. I am not going to give the formula, for obvious reasons, nor am I going to give any hints about the method, but the method is now in place so that extraterrestrial ships can come here only if they need to be here and if it is acceptable for you people on Earth to have them near. Those are the main qualifiers, though there are a couple of others. They can be here now, which is why you are getting more sightings and why there's press about it. It's becoming a regular thing and more people are realizing that it's a real thing. I might add it's nothing to be afraid of. As a matter of fact, it's a great adventure. It will be a lot of fun for most of you, and it's not too far down the road where extraterrestrials will be introduced to you on television and they will be benevolent beings.

ET Greeters to Future Mars Earth Colony

ET from a Future Version of Saturn

September 27, 1999

reetings. I am a visitor from your immediate surroundings. In the future we will be a colony on the planet Mars, a thriving colony initially started by Earth visitors from about the year 2025 and peopled by other individuals from other planets. Initially, the colony will be up near the polar icecap on Mars, but very soon you will discover how to create and regenerate the oxygen you need. My companions and I will be some of the first individuals from other planets who come to visit with you.

The Beginning of ET Contact

At first when you see us, you will be alarmed because of the suit we wear. You will be frightened because the suit is skintight and you will think that the way the suit appears is the way we appear. But in fact, before anyone has a chance to reach for a weapon, I will hold up my hand and say, "Don't worry," in your language. Some of you will hear me in French, others in Japanese, one in Chinese, some in English and so on. I will say, "Don't worry. It's just the suit we're wearing. This is not how we look. We look like you." And then people will lower their weapons.

We're also the first emissaries who come to help you get settled on Mars so that you can have a good life there. A younger member will say some of the usual things people say when they are nervous and excited: “Oh, I have hoped for this for so long. We were looking forward to it. We didn’t know when you’d come.” Then you’ll be outside, the people there will be outside and we’ll talk for a while.

Eventually, one of you will sort of nervously say, “Well, why don’t you come in?” And we’ll say, “Well, we’d be happy to do that, but why don’t you come look at our ship first,” because it will be parked behind a hill and you won’t see it. Then your group will walk around [to the ship]. There will be about twenty-seven or so of you. We’ll all be outside. There will be two or three of you who will have to stay inside but wish they could come. Those people will be working with instruments and so on, so they have to stay and monitor things. But the rest will come around.

You’ll come into the ship and we’ll show you how the ship works. Of course, everybody’s going to want to go for a ride, but we’ll say, “We’ll come back and do that another day. First we want to give you some equipment.” At that time you’ll have discovered how to generate and regenerate oxygen, but it won’t be a lot. Plus you will have discovered by then that the inclusion of a few other gases will be good for not only improving health but for perpetuating longevity. We’ll give you some generators for those. They will look just like small rocks, but in fact they are compressed from elements. I’m sorry I can’t reveal them right now, but in time they will come to be known to you. That would be one of the ways that your peoples of Earth learn how to live longer while also learning how to maintain your population at a level that Earth can sustain. Then there will be a pleasant meeting that will go on for about six hours, after which we’ll leave. But there will be many other times we visit.

I realize that I am not exactly a visitor to Earth in your time, but I will come on a mission at a later time and visit the people of Earth. By that time, around the year 2030, you will have established something not unlike the United Nations, but it will be in another location, probably in Europe. The new United Nations will be a place where people focus less on government and problems and more on intercultural studies and exchanges in order that one culture help out another and practice goodwill toward one another. In short, everybody will help each other. That’s where I’ll go and that’s where people will meet. It will really be the beginning of Earth contact with extraterrestrials in a most benevolent way.

Can you say where you're from?

I will be at that time a resident of the future version of Saturn.

How far in the future?

In terms of your now calendar, it's a bit distorted, but for the sake of a general figure, let's say about 1,200 years.

But you're a human? You look like us?

My people will look like you, but internally we will be a little different. One difference is that you have your heart here on this side of your body.

On the left side.

Yes. Our heart on that side is a little smaller. We have another heart about half that size on the other side. Also, our lungs are shaped a little differently, which allows us to be more flexible in the atmospheres we breathe. Our internal organs are quite a bit different, but externally we will look very much like you. Not exactly, but very much.

You said that at that time you will be a resident of the future Saturn. Did a colony from Earth go there?

No.

Where did the Saturnians come from?

From inside the planet.

They're inside the planet now?

Well, that's where the colony is in that time. It's the colony inside the planet.

What about now? There's no colony there now?

Our people aren't.

Where are your people coming from? Where is your home planet?

I was born on Saturn.

Okay. Who colonized Saturn, then?

I think it is difficult to explain, but the colonization occurred in the future of my time and came back into the present of my time. So the colonization occurred in the future of Saturn; it was colonized from, I believe, Sirius.

So it was colonized in your future, you were born there and then you came into your past, which for us is thirty years from now?

Something like that.

Chosen for First Contact

How did you get chosen to be our first contact?

I had done human studies for a long time and found it most interesting, although I was always alarmed and upset by some of the violent patterns of the past. You have to remember that I'm making this contact twenty-five or thirty years in your now future, and many of the violent patterns you have now will not be as extreme in the future.

But you've studied our now and previous time?

Not much of the previous, but I will have studied your social structure as much as we could understand it from about your calendar year 1985 up to the present moment of the contact.

2030. And how do you study us from afar? Where do you get your data?

We have a small stone. It is not quite as hard as a diamond and not perfectly square—more of a rectangle, a cubelike thing—and we are able to communicate with it. It is able to project an image we can see—not into the air, but in our imaginations—about anything we've ever asked. I don't want to say that this stone can literally do anything because I can only say that it can do anything I've ever asked it to do in terms of providing information. I do not know what it can't do, but I expect it has its boundaries. That's what I can say about it. The stone was given to us by a very advanced civilization from Andromeda who wanted us to learn more about our environment and the environments of other peoples so that we could initiate you and eventually others into a circumstance of social acceptance with other cultures.

You've studied a lot about us, but we don't know anything about you. How do you live inside Saturn 1,200 years from now?

Living Underground

We live in an underground colony. It is not something that is drilled or mined, but a vast underground open space. We do not drill or make any holes in the planet at all, but we have moved portable structures into the space and live in those structures when we need to. At other times we explore this cave. It's huge inside the planet. It has many extraordinary crystal veins, some of which seem to be lighted somehow from within. We are not clear whether this is some kind of a microbiological luminescence or whether it has something to do with the consciousness of the stone itself, but we do not feel compelled to know the answer. It is a huge and vast network of underground caves. It is like being in a crystal palace, it is so beautiful. During the time my people have been here, which is many years, the total amount of exploration of these caves and tunnels amounts to just a tiny fraction of what's available, as far as we can tell.

How did you find the cave?

We are, you might say, kind of futuristic geologists. In the future, geologists do not mine or take anything out, but rather look for and discover mineral life forms such as crystals. They inquire of the crystals what knowledge or wisdom they can pass on to us—what they can do that might be compatible with us and, conversely, what we can do for them if they need anything. Of course, they practically never do, but in short, it is a study of the life form as itself rather than a study of the life form disconnected from its home environment.

That's fantastic! Why did your people choose Saturn? How did they find these caves? What's the story with that?

The Andromedan Connection

I don't have all that information. I can only tell you that the original quest was encouraged by the Andromedans in order to get us closer to the Earth people, and that they recommended this place because they knew of my people's love and appreciation for beauty in many forms.

So the Andromedans have been behind all this—initially, anyway.

The Andromedans have some kind of overall affection for the people of Earth, although they do not seem to approach you directly.

Because they don't look like us?

No, I wouldn't say that was a great issue. They really didn't tell us why, and we didn't ask. For some reason they do not approach you directly, and we are happy to do the job.

What dimension are you in?

We are able to access anything from seven through four, but sometimes we can stretch into three and a half.

In thirty years, we should be a little over three and a half.

I cannot say.

Zoosh got to you.

No, we have our own guides.

How long do you live? What is your society like, your families? Do you live in a way we would understand?

Only partly. Our society has a great deal to do with music and tone, which is part of the reason we're attracted to crystal life forms—because they are connected to color. We generally do not produce more than one child per family in order to maintain our civilization at a certain level of population. We do not have a marriage ceremony as you do, but we tend to take a life mate. We live anywhere from 1,200 to 1,700 of what you now measure as years.

Have you always been on Saturn? Are you all exploring other places, or is Saturn your home and that's what you're exploring?

Saturn is our home and that's all we feel the need to explore. Occasionally, we have visitors from the home world, but we are émigrés, and as most immigrants know, once you accept and appreciate your new world, you don't really feel much urge to go back to where you were from.

Is your home planet a water planet?

Yes.

Conditions Inside Saturn

So are you comfortable in a cave with no water?

There is water.

There's water in the caves?

There are places where there are vast lakes and reservoirs of water and some water creatures. Not like the ones on Sirius, but it's kind of nice to have them there.

Water . . . so are there plants?

There are some plants, mostly in the water rather than around it.

And is Saturn like that right now?

I think it is not completely that way now.

Is it going to change radically in thirty years?

I can't say. This is not my field. I was born there when things were established.

So there's no one on the outside of the planet in any other dimension?

I cannot say, but I am not aware of anybody living on the surface of the planet. It is possible, but I am not aware of them.

How do you live? Do you grow your food or do you make it? What is your lifestyle like? Do you live in houses?

You have to ask one question at a time, because I will usually only answer one. As I said, we brought our own buildings and they're inside the caves. We have some food that we grow, and it is sort of a synthetic substance but it sustains us. We draw quite a bit of sustenance from the water and certain crystals that give us some energy. We do not eat as much as you do and have nowhere near the complexity of the food that you eat. It is a sort of a staple diet of a simple, bland foodstuff.

What about education? Do your children use these stones to learn what they want to study?

No. They have cultural studies, much as you do, but instead of studying facts and figures and famous people, they study values—our values. They study cultural values as well, and morals and principles and how to live, things like that. This is what your educational system will come to once it becomes more universalized—once it faces what I believe is the inevitable fact that an educational system needs to prepare somebody for life, not prepare them to be separate from life.

Well, I think our system has been set up to keep us from knowing anything. You know, it's part of the whole experiment.

Well, at some point it will change completely. Someone will say, “Well, that’s it, I’ve had it,” and teachers will just rebel and say, “We’re not going to teach English anymore. We’re going to teach you how to balance a check-book.” And where do you go from there? By the time the children graduate from high school, they’ll completely understand how to get along, and they won’t have any illusions that everything is supposed to be like the movies. They’ll understand that it’s give and take and there are up days and down days and all that. They’ll be prepared to live in life.

In the real world.

In the world as it exists. And they’ll also be prepared to work toward creating a better world within real opportunities, not unrealistic mythologies.

So did the Andromedans pretty much prepare you about what you should take to the Earth colonists on Mars, or did you devise that yourself?

No, we devised that. The Andromedans don’t oversee us. They just gave us a few things and suggested that we do a few things, but they do not oversee us. No, we just took what we felt you might benefit from. We didn’t give the people we found, the colonists, everything we brought because we brought a broad spectrum of things in case it felt right to give them this or that. We wound up giving them some things, but not everything, just as you might go on a trip and bring many things but not use everything.

Are you the spokesman for the group?

No, but I’m the one who’s talking tonight. I do not claim to be a leader, but when we approached the colonists, I spoke because I just happened to be at the front of the group and I was closest to the closest colonist. That wasn’t the person who went for the weapon, but it felt appropriate for me to speak, so I did.

Three Genders

Were you all men or both men and women?

Men and women. There is another group of us, an equal group, that is something that is neither men nor women, but humanlike.

Is it what Zoosh has called the third sex?

No. I cannot find terms that describe this for you.

They're totally like you except for gender.

Yes, they have a different gender. They do not reproduce. They are born just like anybody else, but they do not reproduce. They are equal citizens like anybody else.

And there's nothing different about what they do? They don't have special jobs or anything?

No, they're not smarter or more foolish. They're just another group. Not a man, not a woman. I do not have a word for them. Our men and our women are a little different from your men and your women, but they're similar.

In what way? In physiology or culture?

Physiology. A little different.

But you all have equal jobs? There's no gender bias or anything like that?

No. It would be a waste of energy, wouldn't it?

Right. How old are you now?

Length of Life, Past Lives

Oh, about 600.

You're not even middle-aged yet.

No, but we don't really think that way. We don't have an aging process like you do.

You keep your vitality and . . .

We keep our vitality up to about, using your time measurement, a week to ten days before our life ends.

Do you choose the time that your natural cycle ends?

We don't mentally choose it, no. It just happens. We just notice. It's quite obvious when you've been vital your whole life and you suddenly start to feel tired and more like you're resting. This is not really unusual, but we can tell that it is our time.

Do you remember your past lives?

Not readily. We can access them if there is a reason to, but we do not access them for curiosity's sake.

For instance, if you had learned something that would be lifesaving or if you had some talent or skill?

If there is something that is needed and it is unavailable, then people will search their past lives, but only then. We believe that it is not good to search past lives because it is easy to get involved in them and distract yourself from your own life and the lives of those you care about.

The point I was getting to was that you're really aware that you've had past lives, so obviously you'll have future lives. Therefore there's no problem with the end of the natural cycle.

We know that there are past lives and we search them only for the reasons I stated.

But that gives you the confidence that there are future lives.

We don't need that confidence. We know there are future lives.

So you don't have what we have, the fear of death and the trauma.

Well, that's only because you're cut off from more of your good and know-ingness, but that's going to change soon.

You're aware of the whole concept of the Explorer Race?

Not the whole concept, but some.

What would you like to tell the people who will read this?

Just know that there are so many people who are interested in you, not only as a species of Earth humans but in your capacity to survive such difficult situations. Equally, there are those who care about you and want to help. We would have approached you to help long, long ago, but we were guided by our teachers and advisers that the time wasn't right. But the time is coming, and those of you who are very young will probably live to hear about our contacting you. Don't fear extraterrestrials. There's nothing to fear but your own fears. The contacts between you and extraterrestrials will be benevolent. The worst it will ever be is boring, but it won't be hostile. Good night.

Thank you very much.
